The Pamban Bridge is a railway bridge on the Palk Strait, Bay of Bengal which connects the town of Rameshwaram to Tamil Nadu. Opened on 24th February, 1914, it was India's first sea bridge and it was the longest sea bridge in India until 2010. The bridge is located in a cyclone-prone high wind making its maintenance a challenging job. Furthermore, it is in the world's most corrosive environment. The bridge is generally referred as 'the queen of Indian bridges' spanning a length of 2065 meters. The other special feature of this bridge is there is a double leaf bascule in the center of the bridge. This section opens up and let the ships and boats
