The work of the heart can never be interrupted. The heart's job is to keep oxygen-rich blood flowing through the body. All the body's cells need a constant supply of oxygen, specially those in the brain. If oxygen is cut off for the brain cells for five minutes, death comes to the entire body. The heart is specialized muscle that serves as a pump. This pump is divided into four chambers connected by tiny doors called valves. The chambers work to keep the blood flowing round the body in a circle. At the end of each circuit, veins carry the blood to the right atrium. In the first of four chambers 2/5 oxygen is used up and it is on its way back to the lungs to pick up a fresh supply and to give up the carbon dioxide it has accumulated. From the right atrium, the blood flows through the tricuspid valve into the second chamber, the right ventricle. The right ventricle contracts when it is filled, pushing the blood through the pulmonary artery which leads to the lungs. In the lung the blood gives up its carbon dioxide and picks up fresh oxygen.

Then it travels to the third chamber, the left atrium. When this chamber is filled, it forces the blood through the valve to the left ventricle. From here it is pushed into a big blood vessel called aorta and sent round the body by way of arteries.

He said this because the first man was sitting on the branch and cutting it at a place between himself and the trunk of the tree. The man on the tree thought, 'This is some foolish person who has no work to do and goes about telling other people what to do and what not to do.' The man continued on his way. Of course, after a few minutes, the branch fell and the man fell with it.

Questions :

(b) What was the advice of another man?
(c) Did he listen to the advice of the other man?
(d) What happened when he continued with the sawing?
